Get Organized: Paper Management
Tuesday, May 28, 7 pm
Piles, stacks, and stuff on a desk or kitchen counter is a constant struggle for some people. They always seem to be looking for a specific piece of paper or an important receipt in a huge pile of paper clutter. The average American spends about 55 minutes a day, roughly 12 weeks a year, looking for things they know they own but cannot find. That translates to lost time and money wasted. The solution? A new system to handle current papers, file archives, and store important tax material. Professional Organizer Lorraine Brock with Get Organized! will share real solutions and concepts for better management of out of control paper clutter. She also offers information on appropriate time to keep certain papers, going paperless, and a better system for organizing miscellaneous notes and documents.
